

Medical Image of the Week: Purpura Fulminans

Figure 1: Purpura fulminans, a cutaneous manifestation of disseminated intravascular coagulation, due to Group A streptococcal septic shock (A), which improved with antibiotics, resuscitation, IVIG infusion, and topical nitroglycerin (B).

Jarrold Mosier, MD and John Bloom, MD
Emergency Medicine-Critical Care Program
Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care
University of Arizona
Tucson, Arizona